Social assistance in brief

Social assistance, or income support, is a last-resort form of financial assistance which covers some of the basic necessities of life. Social assistance is intended to be a source of short-term financial aid that helps recipients overcome or avoid temporary difficulties and promotes their autonomy and independence.

Who can get social assistance?

If all your income and assets do not cover your essential daily expenses, such as housing, food, medical care and clothing, you can apply for basic social assistance from Kela. Other social security benefits are counted as income.

Before applying for basic social assistance you must first consider all other sources of income that could be available to you, and find out if you are entitled to social security benefits such as unemployment or housing allowances. First apply for all other benefits to which you are entitled.
