What benefits can you get from Kela?

Kela can pay benefits in many different life situations. You can get benefits if you cannot work for instance because you have small children, you are ill or you study. The benefits Kela can pay are defined in Finnish law.

Benefits paid by Kela include for instance

- national pension, guarantee pension and other benefits for pensioners
- general housing allowance
- reimbursements for medicine costs
- other benefits in case of illness
- unemployment benefits
- financial aid for students
- benefits for families.

Kela card

Kela issues a Kela card to everyone who has the right to get reimbursements for medicine costs or other illness-related benefits.

If you have a Kela card and you go to a private medical clinic for treatment, you can often get reimbursement for the costs of your treatment right away by showing your Kela card at the clinic.

This way you do not have to apply for reimbursement afterwards.

The Kela card is free of charge, and Kela sends it to your home address.

Who can get Kela benefits?

You can usually get benefits from Kela in the following situations:

- You live in Finland permanently.
- You work in Finland and you earn at least about EUR 800 per month in salary or wages.

An exception to this is if you live in Finland but you work in another EU country.

In that case, you can usually not get benefits from Kela.

What does it mean to live permanently in a country?

You live in Finland permanently if your main residence and home is here. You must also stay in Finland for at least 6 months of the year.

When you move to Finland, Kela will check if your move can be considered permanent.

Your overall situation is considered, and it is affected by, for example, the following factors:

- You have lived in Finland before.
- The duration of your employment contract if you come to Finland to work.
- Your partner or some other close relative lives in Finland permanently.

If you move to Finland temporarily, you do not usually have the right to Kela benefits.

For example, asylum seekers do not have the right to Kela benefits.

Which country did you move from?

Your right to Kela benefits is affected by the country you left to move to Finland.

Kela benefits are affected by whether this country is a member country of the European Union (EU) or of the European Economic Area (EEA), Switzerland, the United Kingdom or a country that has signed a social security agreement with Finland.

The EU countries are:

- Finland
- Austria
- Belgium
- Bulgaria
- Croatia
- Cyprus
- Czech Republic
- Denmark
- Estonia
- France
- Germany
- Greece
- Hungary
- Ireland
- Italy
- Latvia
- Lithuania
- Luxembourg
- Malta
- the Netherlands
- Poland
- Portugal
- Romania
- Slovakia
- Slovenia
- Spain
- Sweden.

The EEA countries are

- the countries in the European Union
- Iceland
- Liechtenstein
- Norway.

Finland has signed social security agreements with the following countries

- Australia
- Canada (and Quebec)
- Chile
- China
- India
- Israel
- Japan
- the Nordic countries
- South Korea
- the United States.

When you move to Finland

The conditions you have to meet to get Kela benefits are different depending on if you move to Finland as

- a worker or a self-employed person
- a posted worker
- an accompanying family member
- a student
- a pensioner.

If you have a municipality of residence (kotikunta) in Finland, you can use public healthcare services.

Your local municipal health centre is usually the first place you should go for treatment.

If you do not have a municipality of residence, ask Kela to check if you have the right to use public healthcare services.

Benefits for employees and self-employed persons

You can get some benefits from Kela if you work in Finland. Examples of these benefits are sickness allowance and the child benefit.

You have the right to get benefits from Kela in the months when you earn at least about EUR 800 by working.

If you work in Finland for at least 6 months, you may have the right to certain Kela benefits even after you have stopped working.

If you are a worker, you also have the right to occupational health services. Ask your employer for more information.

When you move to Finland, your life situation will affect what Kela benefits you can get.

Posted workers

Posted workers are persons that a foreign employer has sent to work in Finland.

If you come to Finland as a posted worker from another EU or EEA country or from Switzerland or the United Kingdom, you are covered by the social security system of the country you came from. In such case, you do not have the right to Kela benefits. You need a certificate A1 from the country you were sent from.

If you come as a posted worker from a country that has signed a social security agreement with Finland, ask Kela to check if you can get Kela benefits. The agreements Finland has signed with different countries differ from each other.

Kela benefits if you do not work in Finland

Family members

If you move to Finland as the family member of an employee or a student, you will usually have to live in Finland permanently to qualify for Kela benefits.

Students

If you move to Finland from a country that is not an EU or EEA country, Switzerland or the United Kingdom solely to study in Finland, you can get some Kela benefits, such as sickness allowance and daily allowances for parents. Your studies must last for at least 2 years for you to qualify.

However, you may not have the right to all Kela benefits, such as student financial aid, housing allowance or the maternity grant.

Students who come to Finland from another EU country usually do not have the right to Kela benefits.

You may have the right to Kela benefits if you also work in Finland in addition to studying. But even in that case, you will usually not qualify for student financial aid.

If you come to Finland to complete a higher education degree, you can use the healthcare services provided by the Finnish Student Health Service (FSHS).

Pensioners

If you move to Finland as a pensioner, you must live in Finland permanently to qualify for Kela benefits.

When can you get Kela benefits?

You usually qualify for Kela benefits starting from the day you move to Finland or start working in Finland.

However, Kela pays some benefits only to persons who have lived in Finland for a certain period of time before they are granted the benefit.

Examples of these benefits are

- pensions paid by Kela
- disability allowance for persons who are over 16 years old.

When checking if you can get certain benefits, Kela will take into consideration periods you have lived or worked in another EU or EEA country, Switzerland or the United Kingdom.

Example: Rachel moves to Finland for work

Rachel moves to Finland from the United States to work for a Finnish company.

When she arrives, Rachel tells Kela that she will live in Finland only for a few months.

Because this is a short, temporary stay, she does not qualify for Kela benefits that are granted on the basis of residency.

However, because Rachel came to Finland to work, she qualifies for certain Kela benefits that are granted based on employment immediately after she starts working.

Kela will pay these benefits to her if she meets the other conditions that apply to them.

These benefits include, for example, reimbursements for medical expenses and sickness allowance.

Later Rachel's employment is made permanent.

Rachel's temporary stay in Finland turns into permanent residence.

This means that she now lives in Finland permanently.

After this, Rachel also has the right to benefits that are only paid to persons who live in Finland permanently.

These benefits include, for example, housing allowance and the maternity grant.

Example: Amila moves to Finland to study

Amila moves to Finland from Sri Lanka.

Amila starts a course of study at a university of applied sciences. Amila's studies last for 4 years.

This means that she qualifies for some Kela benefits.

For example, Amila can get sickness allowance.

However, Amila does not qualify for student financial aid or housing benefits.
